

WORK GOES ON TO SAVE LIVES OF SICK BABIES

Doctors on The Evening
World's Staff Visit 433
Tenement Families.

TREAT 724 LITTLE ONES.

In One House They Find Twenty Cases of Whooping Cough.

IN PITIABLE CONDITION.

Ailing Babies Are Fed on Cheap Candy, Beer and "Hokey Pokey."

In the fight to save lives of babies which The Evening World's physicians are making in the tenements and crowded districts 433 tenements were visited during the week ending July 24.
In those tenements 6,508 were attended and 724 sick babies were treated.

The work for the physicians is an exhausting one, but the conditions with which they have to combat are staggering.

In one instance where a physician visited an ailing child he learned that the baby's diet of the previous night had been chopped raw meat and beer.
The little victim of this diet was only a year old.

Twenty had Whooping Cough.

In one of the houses visited twenty cases of whooping cough were found.
Not a breath of fresh air was allowed to enter the room, and the little sufferers, who were being fed on whatever indigestible food the table of the adults provided, were in a pitiable condition.

One of the abominations of the east side is the "all-day suckers." These stickers of cheap candy are given the babies, who suck them all day long.

Beer, lemon soda and other carbonated drinks are fed to the babies of all ages.
"Hokey pokey," another terror for health, is the real "front." Babies are fed this stuff, and when their delicate stomachs rebel they are fed more to quiet them. Decaying vegetable matter and other garbage in the living room is one of the evils the doctors have to fight against in trying to save the babies' lives. Little gasping babies are found in dirty beds with reeking garbage in the corner emitting maddening fumes into the room. It is a wonder the babies give up the struggle and die.

The pitiable condition of the mothers of babies is reported from all the Evening World corps of doctors. To try and teach them sanitary and sensible means of treating the babies is the problem the doctors are fighting out.

Suggestions for Mothers.

Here are a few good suggestions, and if mothers would only follow them they would save the babies from needless suffering, and in many cases save their lives:

1. Nurse if. Nothing equals mother's milk for a baby food. If you cannot nurse the baby use fresh milk, which in hot weather has been boiled and prepared according to directions. (A discussion of directions will be sent on application to the Department of Health.) Nurse the baby part of the time if you cannot nurse it all the time. Do not give it condensed milk or any prepared babies' food.

2. Feed or nurse it at regular intervals, not more than once in three hours after it is six weeks old. Don't feed it simply because it cries. Decrease the amount of milk on very hot days. Too much food and too frequent feeding are among the commonest causes of sickness.

3. Bathe it daily. The glands of the skin carry off nearly as much poisonous matter as the bowels. They both must be kept open in hot weather. Dry the skin well after bathing.

4. Air it. Out of door air is necessary. Keep the head shaded from the direct sunlight. In hot weather take the baby out early in the morning before 9 o'clock, when it is cool, and again late in the afternoon and early evening, but not late at night.

5. Keep it cool. If it is bundled up too much in summer it will become overheated. The more nearly naked it is the better in extremely hot weather.

6. Keep it in a quiet place. A baby's nerves are very sensitive. Continued noise sometimes causes sickness.

7. Give it water. Between feedings give water freely, especially in hot weather. Use only water that has been boiled.

8. Give no fruit to a baby less than a year old. In summer give no fruit, for a baby less than two years old. Fruit kills many babies.

9. Give no solid food to a baby less than one year old. For the first year of life the food should be all milk. For the second year change milk.

10. Call your own doctor or, if you have none in summer, call at once if the baby has diarrhoea, or is sick, and do not try to cure it yourself.

11. When the baby has diarrhoea stop all food and give only barley water until the doctor calls.

12. Use bottled or certified milk. Pas-terized milk is the best prepared and furnished at the various dispensaries (see creamer's milk) if you cannot nurse the baby.

13. Let's Donations.

The following donations have been received:

To the Editor of The Evening World: I have enclosed a check for $2.50 for the sick babies. We made it at a little fair and lawn party and sent it with best wishes.

14 More Sick Babies Are Off for Sea Breeze

If only the bachelors could have been there today.

It was a sight that would have caused a sort of queer, inexplicable feeling to well up in the bachelor heart.

Bachelor Tax would have lost all purely monetary significance, and only the great big fund of sympathy which must lurk in every human heart would have made that tax of $5 which sends a sick baby and mother to Sea Breeze for a week seem like easily purchased gratitude.

Fourteen babies and their mothers started off this morning for a health-giving week beside the sea through The Evening World's Bachelor Tax funds.

Fourteen of them, man and wife and tired-looking, but every one of them with the gleam of anticipation in their eyes. Even the tiniest babies seemed to realize that something good was going to happen to them, for they drew from their mothers that greatest of all feelings—the thought of a real chance for health and life.

Nineteen at Sea Breeze.

Fourteen bachelors are making twenty-eight people happy, well and strong.
Now the number of babies who are sent to Sea Breeze by the Bachelors' Tax has reached nineteen. Already five little sufferers with their mothers have been sent to the seaside resort, where the fresh ocean breezes and invigorating air have made new babies and new women of the weeping lives saved from the heated tenements.

Today's party of fourteen babies and fourteen mothers was the largest. The Evening World Bachelor Fund has sent over to the health-giving resort, but if the bachelors continue to increase their interest it looks as though these kind-hearted men who have no homes and family responsibilities of their own are going to stand by the little helpless children.

If the bachelors' babies who left New York today for Sea Breeze are not given a new lease on life it won't be the fault of those fourteen bachelors who bought life and happiness for twenty-eight people for the sum of $5.
Think of it, $5 worth of health and happiness! Seventy dollars! If the bachelors could have seen those fourteen gasping little babies this morning with their congested chests, tired-looking mothers, four months, three months, two months, one year old, were two little ones from one family who went to Sea Breeze, sent by our bachelors.

Then there was Frank McAndrews, aged six months; Charles McNeil, sixteen months; Sadie Maloney, seventeen months; Mary Melvin, sixteen months; Lillian Reynolds, sixteen months; Martha Seaman, eleven months; Agnes Connell, eight months, and William Riley, twenty-one months.

While today's big party of twenty-eight helps a lot of New York sufferers in the congested districts, there are lots of babies who are pining for some goodhearted bachelor to give them a week's chance at life at Sea Breeze.

All money for this fund should be addressed to the cashier of The World and marked "Bachelor Tax."

DROWNED IN NORTH RIVER.

Body of Unidentified Man Is Recovered by Police.

The body of an unidentified man was to-day found floating in the North

River at the foot of West Thirty-first street.

The man was apparently forty-five years old, five feet eight inches tall, weighing 150 pounds. He was of light complexion and had a light mustache.
He wore a gray check suit and a blue shirt. The body was taken to the West Thirty-seventh Street Station.

"CHOO-CHOO'S" HEAD WATER IS SHOT UP BY A WOMAN

Called to Door of Chatham Square Saloon to See a "Loidy Fren" and Gets Bullet in the Arm.

Jim Kelly is head waiter in "Scotty" Lavelle's "Choo-Choo" cafe in Chatham Square. Monday night he went to the emporium dressed in unusually stylish up-to-date bowery attire and wearing a "headlight" stone in his expansive shirt front which was a dangle to the eyes of his "frens." He was accompanied by another "dazzler," a pretty, dark-eyed girl, with figure petite and demeanor "fine," as the habitués expressed it.

Jim said in response to all anxious inquiries, "Oh, she's my wife. Cert,

panied by another "dazzler," a pretty,
pressed it.

Early today, when the "Choo-Choo" was full blast and the saloon door attendant was keeping watchful eye for the approach of plain-clothes men, Jim's "wife" appeared.

"Say," she said to the attendant, "tell Jim I want to see him," and the attendant went inside and told Jim to be busy, as a loidy outside wanted him.

"Hello there, May!" exclaimed Jim, coming to the threshold and speaking with spirited vein, "Glad to see you!" and then he tried to leap aside as a quadratically aimed revolver in the right hand of the young woman went off and a bullet lodged in the forearm of the head waiter.

"Take that, and if that isn't enough I'll come back and give you more if it is needed," said the young woman, her eyes blazing as she replaced the revolver beneath the folds of her skirt and then walked calmly away.

Jim was not prepared to make a squalid scene about the saloon door and told the men and women inside that there was nothing doing, when they arose at the firing and tried to climb out of windows.

The cops didn't hear anything about the shooting until an hour afterward.
In the mean time Jim had gone to St.
Gregory's hospital near by, and had the bullet wound dressed. "Ain't a squealing on anybody," he told the police when the hospital authorities appeared there. "She is said to be living at No. 127 Pitt street, and the police are looking for her. Jim says he won't help them to find her.
